

First Encounters

We can make new people feel welcome in our place.

Everyone has a place where they belong.

Early Learning Conceptual understandings

We can respect and adapt to different tikanga we encounter.

People and settlement have a variety of impacts on our area.

The actions of Captain Cook have had ongoing consequences for Aotearoa New Zealand.

Years 1-10 Conceptual understandings

> The situation in Aotearoa New Zealand would have been different if his first encounter with Māori had ended badly for Captain Cook.

There are things our communities could do to address the pāmamae and pain of Captain Cook's first encounters with Māori.

The first encounters between Pākehā and and grief of these encounters impacts on people today.

feelings and opinions of Iwi about the arrival of Pākehā to Aotearoa New Zealand were affected by whether or not lwi encountered Cook.

There are a variety of groups who have an interest in the first encounters between Māori and Pākehā. Each group has different values.

Māori impacted Māori human rights.

The pāmamae

Different groups who came to Aotearoa New Zealand had different motives which influenced their actions.

We can learn from the coming to Aotearoa New

> There are things our communities could do to right some of the wrongs that occurred in the first encounters.

The story of the first encounters is told in different ways by different groups. This has many consequences.

first encounters to help us respond to other groups Zealand.